

The FCC should not give in to commercial interest pressures to implement a "copy flag" on HDTV broadcasts. At the very least such measures are at most an inconvenience for those who will willfully pirate such content, and often a major hassle for the end consumer.

As TIVO user, there are often more programs that I have recorded and would like to watch than I have time to watch. The inability to move those shows due to "copyright flags" would seriously detract from my ability to enjoy the shows broadcast over the public airwaves for the benefit of the public.

The technology does not work, and using it is like ordering the public to use bias ply tires again.
